SONG OF THE SORDID SWEETHEART.

I loved thee for thy money,
For wealth, which said, "wasthe";
But finding thou didst me, I
But the world had resented,
That it was not I who paid thee,
Dost me not use these ill;
I like them—but maintain these,
I neither can nor will.

I thought thee quite a treasure—
A honest fellow, too;

A man of joy, and pleasure
That never were to come;

The horses—the horses—the horses—

The fortune world allow;

The wines—the dozen courses—

The dream is over now!

Not for the charms I woosed thee,

Though thou wast passing fair;

Not for thy mind I used thee;

The wealth stored with talents rare;

For that I held thee dear;

I trusted that d'ye have brought me

Five thousand pounds a year.

What hope, alas! is blighted.

Thereon I will not dwell,

I should have been delighted

To wed thee—but farewell!

My feelings let me smother,

Hard though the struggle be,

And try and find another,

Rich as I fancied thee.
